With 3 decades of corporate experience, in building and managing large portfolios, account relationships and amplifying human potential, Thirumala Arohi (Thiru) strongly advocates that learning, collaboration and innovation are complementary forces.

Currently Senior Vice President & Head of Education, Training & Assessment (ETA) at Infosys Limited, Thiru drives innovation to empower platform-driven learning interventions to enable a future-ready talent, within Infosys, client organizations and the societal pool.

Thiru's association with Infosys of over 25 years spans a variety of business roles both in India and United States. Thiru's experience in managing software delivery projects, across the globe made him a natural choice to transform ETA through digital learning platforms and apps to improved educator and learner experience. The success and growth of these platforms keeps us on the path to constantly amplifying human potential. To boost our software platforms with holistic ecosystems, Thiru is orchestrating relationships and partnerships with leading universities and MOOCs to bridge industry and academia. Using a digital-first approach to college education, ETA is nudging universities to reimagine education.

Thiru acknowledges the source of his energy is in knowing these interventions and experiences created by his team, arm people with the right tools and sources of knowledge to realize their true potential. By creating solutions at the intersection of next-gen digital, virtual, AI/ML, and hybrid collaboration, we are empowering the talent of the future and enabling tomorrow's workforces.

Thiru serves on the board of I.E Business School, Madrid and anchors Infosys Springboard, the digital inclusion and learning platform delivering the digital skills to succeed for millions of people and creating a more equal digital future for all.
