

"The Vision He Dreamed"

Born in silence, he dared to rise,
With clarity and truth in his eyes.
He fought for those who were left behind,
A vision of equality, pure and kind.

Not just for self, but for the denied,
He built a world where all could reside.
He dreamed of schools, where all could learn,
Of justice, where no soul would burn.

His book of laws, a nation's call,
To break the chains, to uplift all.
The fight continues, it's ours to carry—
Equality for all, we must not tarry.
